

ESCAPE!

CAN THE KOHUT FAMILY OUTRUN THE NAZI JUGGERNAUT?

Plunge into the novels (based on true events) that take the Kohuts headlong through Germany, France and England ... enduring loss, fear and suspense as the Allies declare war on the seemingly invincible German military machine. Live with Willy and Sophie Kohut as they try to survive in three different cultures and desperately try to hold their marriage together—with their small son Pavel caught in the middle.

Fascinating characters, rich inner and outer dialogue, and boatloads of unanswered questions—fans of the era will be absorbed in this tension-filled story from the very first page.

*Pacific Northwest
Writer's Association*

Curtis vividly evokes the atmosphere and stresses of the time, assisted by his firm grasp and weaving of historical facts.

*Jaroslav Bouček, PhDr.CSc,
Military Historian,
Prague Czech Republic*

Overview

This is the story of the devastating impact of the Nazi occupation of Prague on a young family. Willy Kohut, married to beautiful Sophie and father to two year old Pavel, sells luxury British suit fabrics. After his arrest and release by the Gestapo, they abandon their home, risking a journey through Nazi Germany to find freedom in France and a safe haven in England.

www.petercurtisauthor.com

Peter Curtis

I'm a retired Professor of Medicine (University of North Carolina) turned writer, born in Central Europe, raised in the UK. I migrated with my family to the USA in 1976. My writing is based on true events that I and my family experienced in WW2. The third book, AFTER THE BLITZ is in progress.

In The Dragontail Buttonhole, Peter Curtis' excellent debut novel, we follow the dramatic journey of the Jewish Kohut family from Nazi-occupied Prague to Paris. And then with Café Budapest Curtis creates a masterful description of refugee life in Paris under the threat of war, the twists and turns of finding lodging, food and money.

Helen Szablyahj, Hon. Consul General Hungary

Author PETER CURTIS :

Event: _____

Place : _____

Time : _____